Marcia Keppy, right, corporate records administrator, General Counsel, and Pat Parrish, banks reconciliation and control supervisor, Treasury, use new software to find missing persons and organizations to whom Phillips owes money.

Got Some $ Coming? We May Be Looking for You

Ever balance your checkbook and discover that someone still hasn't cashed one of your checks? This problem gets compounded at Phillips, which must reconcile scores of uncashed checks for dividends, products, services, royalty payments, overpayment of credit card accounts — even payroll checks.

Often checks can't even be delivered because of errors in addresses or because the payee has moved and left no forwarding address.

If checks remain uncashed long enough, state escheat (unclaimed property) laws will resolve the situation. Such laws require that after a varying number of years the funds must be paid to a state.

Yet Phillips is making an extra effort to find lost payees.

"Partly it's just good business, but it's also because we care about the people we do business with," says Marcia Keppy, who coordinates a team effort by General Counsel, Corporate Relations and Services-Central Administration, Treasury, Exploration and Production, GPM and Phillips 66 Co.

In 1992 Keppy helped form the Unclaimed Property Holders Liaison Council (UPHLC) — an organization with members from some 50 major companies. One purpose of the group is to work with state administrators to resolve differences in the 52 escheat laws (for every state plus Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico).

Meeting with other UPHLC members has already paid off: It led to Phillips' recent purchase of a computer-based search service tied to a network of credit bureaus. A search now runs about $1.80 per person — a fraction of the previous cost.

The most satisfying part of the job, says Keppy, is delivering money to people who don't expect it. Such deliveries also boost Phillips' reputation. Just ask Mrs. Dixie Wilde of Broken Arrow, Okla., who recently received $1,600 in dividend payments to replace checks that had somehow been lost.

"We always heard Phillips was a good company," she says. "Now we really believe it."

Introduction

In the United States today, experts think that about $40 billion in unclaimed money is collecting dust in state Abandoned and Unclaimed Property offices. Some of the monetary items that end up in a state's possessions after being declared abandoned by the holding institution include:

- forgotten bank accounts
- un-cashed stock dividends
- insurance payments
- safe deposit boxes
- utility deposits
- travelers checks
- money orders
- security deposits
- gift cards and certificates

People move away, lose track of investments, or die, and the accounts or funds, after a set amount of time — frequently three to five years - are reported to the state Treasurer's Escheats, Comptroller's, or Revenue office. The state then tries to track down, the owners and return the money.

If you think financial property may be held by your state, the first step is to contact the appropriate office (a state by state list follows) to find out whether your name is listed. Or, in the case of the estate of a deceased person, the listing would be under his/her name.

You will then fill out a claim form which you must return together with the required identification or proof of ownership. Requirements for proving ownership may vary according to the amount of the claim and the complications involved, but frequently states will ask for such things as copies of driver's licenses, social security numbers, and bank account numbers and passbooks. Most require that the information be notarized. A few states have limitations on how long they keep abandoned property before turning it over to state coffers, but most keep it indefinitely. Some also pay interest on ' the money if the property was originally interest-bearing.

Honest Finders vs. Vultures

The states currently owe money from abandoned property to an estimated one in ten people in the United States, according to attorney David Epstein. But many states do not have the resources to investigate every case, and do little more than advertise names of owners in local newspapers. The resulting gap is sometimes filled by professional "finders" or "heir searchers" who find the owners themselves and charge a fee or commission in exchange for returning it. They can obtain lists, legally in most cases but sometimes surreptitiously, of the names of the owners from the state offices, then conduct their own search. Some finders have charged commissions of 60% to 100%. The price of one finder's fee in a past Colorado case was 30% of the dividends and all the shares of stock!

Finders can, however, perform a valuable service by reuniting people with money that would have been lost to them forever. Because of cases where these finders have charged excessive fees to people for returning their own money, and because of the strain their demands have put on some already over-burdened state offices, the finders have a shady reputation in some quarters. One state office, for example, refers to them as "bounty hunters," and another calls them "vultures." Many state offices feel that the finders infringe on the owner's right to have their money returned with no charge involved, which is the goal of the state.

The National Association of Abandoned Property Administrators says that since the states never find 100% of the owners) there is a place for honest finders. For example, if a state is unable to locate the owner of a sizable property that they did not even know about, and a finder does the job, then a service has been performed.

Many states, such as Texas, limit the amount of commission a finder may charge; and others have confidentiality laws that prevent them from aiding finders in any way.

One of the biggest obstacles states face is obtaining the cooperation of the banks, insurance companies, and other institutions in reporting properties to them.

Despite laws that govern how a holding institution should deal with dormant accounts, they are often low priority items in a business. The states use to sometimes have to work very hard to convince unclaimed fund holders that they were best qualified to return the money. All 50 of the United States have passed laws that penalize lax holding companies by charging them a fee.

With billions of dollars in property sitting around out there unclaimed, clearly many people have an interest in what happens to it. Finders, keepers, states and businesses all have something at stake, and the losers will be those who fail to take advantage of the services that are available. For the entrepreneurial minded individual, the finder's fee opportunity represents the obvious "no-brainer" stake.

Preface

Unclaimed property is the original consumer protection program. Unclaimed property laws have been around since at least the 1940s, but have become much broader and more enforced in the last 15 years. Every one of the 50 states, District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands – and Quebec, British Columbia and Alberta in Canada have unclaimed property programs. Each have two mandates, they are to collect lost and unclaimed property from its holders and to actively find owners of these lost and forgotten assets.

What is Unclaimed Property?

Simply stated, any account in a financial institution or business that has not had any activity over a specific period of time. Specifics, like the period of time, are defined by the type of account and individual states and laws. Every state has different statutes and rules that govern Unclaimed Property.

Some examples of unclaimed property:

- Stocks
- Dividends
- Bonds
- Salaries or wages
- Savings accounts
- Safe Deposit Box contents
- Oil and gas royalties
- Mineral proceeds
- Pension Funds

Who could be affected by Unclaimed Property?

- Children
- Widowed Parent or Spouse
- Former Employees

- Heirs
- Memory Loss Patients (people with Alzheimer's)
- Royalty Owners
- Senior Citizens
- Widows or Widowers

A total nearing close to $39.797 billion is currently being held by state treasurers and other agencies for 121 million accounts. In FY 2007 from business accounts, $5.126 billion in unclaimed money was received by the different states and provinces where contact has been lost with the rightful owners. $1.754 billion was returned to the rightful owners in Fiscal Year 2006.

The average individual does not know they have unclaimed money nor do they know how to claim it. The state agencies responsible for policing unclaimed monies have attempted to make the claiming of unclaimed money as easy as possible, however, most people are intimidated and frightened by governmental procedures and are unwilling to try to make a claim. That is why this is such a bountiful opportunity.

The secret to heir finder prosperity is sheervolume. Yes, on occasion you will encounter a mega unclaimed property estate, however, the majority of your finds will be in the hundreds and thousand dollar range. Processing hundreds of claims weekly for small finder's fees can amount to multiple thousands of dollars per week earned. With an average time spent of 45 minutes to an hour to locate an unclaimed money owner, this amounts to hundreds of dollars an hour. Even part-time you can double your income with minimal investment and effort.

The $40 Billion Opportunity

Are you interested in staking a claim for a share of the $40,000,000,000 the government holds for just completing a few internet searches, making a few phone calls and looking in some phone books and city directories? That is all you have to do to begin earning thousands of dollars daily and in some cases, hourly. If you can read English and speak on the phone, and are slightly computer literate (a computer is not really necessary, however it does speed up the process) you can make thousands of dollars overnight — and you don't have to sell anything!

If you're tired of tired of expending hours trying to sell products and services that don't appeal to your potential customer, here is the perfect business opportunity for you. All you have to do is gather a little information about who owns some money and tell them about it.

How often do you think you will be turned down when you contact someone to inform them that you are contacting them to give them money that they were not aware they had. This plan is radical and it is not that well-known. And another great thing is this opportunity never ends because the government continues to collect more and more money every year.

I stumbled upon this opportunity purely by accident. Five years ago I got involved in a bad business investment and lost $37,000. That was all that I had so I lost everything. I needed money desperately to feed me and my family, so I was forced to take a job way below what I believed my station to be. I worked as a waiter at the Sheraton Hotel in Hawaii by night, and work as a clerical assistant during the day. It was so exhausting that as soon as I got home I would sleep for just a few hours, wake up in a stupor, drink four cups of coffee and then scramble to-my next job.

I had no choice. It was the only thing I could do to stop disappointing my loved ones. I remember coming home on Mother's Day really eager to call my mother, only to find that my phone had been disconnected.

I went through the mailpraying for some good news, only to find an envelope with no return address — it contained my eviction notice. Thing were really getting bad. At that point I begin believing I would have to take my family and we would have to live in our beat-up Ford station wagon. Thankfully I had a friend who cared enough and was kind enough to let us stay with them. I never knew life could be so miserable. I sat down on the sidewalk realizing just how much being in debt could hurt. With tears in my eyes, I prayed for a way out.

My friend Jimbo, who was also experiencing similar financial problems as I, told me a story that changed my life forever. As I mentioned, he was in the same financial boat as I. But that changed. He could hardly contain himself. He told me very excitedly, "I received a funny-looking letter. When I first saw it, I thought it was another creditor making a claim on me. I almost threw it away. I am glad I did not. The letter told me about money that was rightfully mine — it said that if I signed the enclosed form, I would receive $2,592.59. Things were so bad that I had nothing to lose, so I signed the form and quickly returned it to the company.

"A couple weeks later I received a check for $2,592.59. A distant aunt had died and left $4,320.98 in her savings account. The company that found me collected $1,728.39. The firm had no trouble finding out that I was related to her. Just for doing some research and matching up people with the same last names, that agency must be earning millions of dollars every year."

It was just then that an amazing idea popped into my mind. I was overcome with excitement. This revolutionary system was so simple. I knew that anyone could do what this company was doing and make thousands of dollars for finding the rightful owners of lost money. All I had to do was come up with a system for finding them and getting the money to them. I worked out a plan.

It's a very simple plan. I was never considered smart. I had a C-plus grade point average in high school and one year I even failed English. But I didn't let that keep me from putting my plan into action. I was determined because my family needed the money and I saw an opportunity that I knew I could do.

I knew if I applied myself and followed through my plan would work. What made it the ideal opportunity for me is that the start-up cost was very low. I did not have to invest a lot of capital in equipment or license or nothing like that. My only real difficulty was determining how do I find out who has unclaimed funds due to them. That became simple after a little research. This business has no seasons; it works well in both good and bad economic conditions, all year round. That was two years ago.

Last summer I moved my family into a newly custom built home. My wife told me it was her life long dream to own a brand new car. You should have seen her tears of joy when I surprised her with her with a brand new Honda Van. This year I bought a newLexus coupefor myself.

The amount of money I was earning is incredible. How much...? Well I don't want to mention figures because everyone that works the plan I will be explaining in this book is different. Some will earn less than I did and some will earn more...much more. Let's just say as a tax shelter, I invested over half a million dollars in income propertiesand a quarter of a million dollars in other tax deferred instruments.

You can do the exact same thing.

Now anyone can earn thousands of dollars just by finding people who are entitled to unknown monies due them. And, believe it or not, there is over fifty billion dollars just sitting out there waiting to be recovered. Ten percent of American citizens have either forgotten or lost money in bank accounts, stocks, insurance premiums, gift cards, safety deposit boxes, security deposits and other means. Of those entitled to these unclaimed funds, less than 17% of these people are getting their money back.

Do the math...the U.S. population is approximately 280 million people. Ten per cent, minimum are due unclaimed funds. That's 28 million people. Of that 28 million only 17% know and seek out their unclaimed funds, either because they are knowledgeable of the program or have been contacted by a finder or the state that is holding their funds. That totals 476,000 or less than half a million of a total 28 million people who have been contacted. That leaves a market of over 27,500,000 others individuals who need to be made aware of unclaimed funds awaiting their claim.

Now understand that these numbers are only estimates based on statistics provided by industry findings. The actual numbers may be more or less. I extended the figures out to give you an idea of how large a market there is available to work with. This is not a well publicized opportunity. There is only a small number of professional finder's currently providing this service. This opportunity is far from being saturated. How many of this number to you think live in your state? There are people in all fifty states that have unclaimed funds due them.

The states do make some effort to contact the rightful owners; however, it is not a strong effort. Limited budget and manpower resources restrict their effectiveness. They are slow to increase available funds to beef up their contact efforts, and why should they? Unclaimed property is one of their largest sources of revenue, second only to taxes? The states are required by law to make a list of unclaimed owners, but most of the people who are owed money don't know about these lists.

Locating People

How hard is it to locate an individual who owns unclaimed property? One California bank had an unclaimed property list with Bob Hope and Lucille Ball on it.

Here's an example. Let's look at what someone who has never done an unclaimed property search was able to do. Thomasine Steinhart, a writer for a small east coast weekly newspaper who doesn't know that much about finding people located the owners of $4,100 unclaimed funds refund in two-and-a-half hours with two telephone directories. She went to the Maryland Treasurer Office, Department of Unclaimed Property and picked up a list of current unclaimed property owners. She started with only 15 names. She began making phone calls. On her very first phone call, she reached the "lost money" owner's mother who told her that her daughter was still living at the address and had been for 33 years.

You will be able to do the same. All you need is a phone book, city directories, library references, a current state list of unclaimed property claimants and some time to make yourself a fortune. This guide will show you exactly how to find people on unclaimed property lists.

$750,000 Deposits Go Unclaimed in S.F. Banks

Neglected Riches for State After 20 Years

Figures Hide Stories of Human Tragedies

San Francisco banks rapidly are completing their respective reports of deposits unclaimed during the ten and twenty years preceding January 1, 1921. Banking authorities here say that the sum will approximate $750,000. This estimate largely is based on the fact that deposits unclaimed during the ten and twenty years preceding January 1, 1919, totaled $420,957.48.

The law provides that every bank in California shall make an annual report of deposits unclaimed during the twenty years preceding the date of said report. It also provides that, in odd years, the banks shall make additional reports, showing the deposits unclaimed during the preceding ten years.

PROVISION OF LAW

In this connection the law stipulates that:

"All amounts of money heretofore or hereafter deposited with any bank to the credit of depositors who have not made a deposit on said account, or withdrawn any part thereof, or the interest, and which shall have remained unclaimed for more than twenty years after the date of such deposit, or withdrawal of any part of principal or interest, and where neither the depositor nor any claimant has filed any notice with such bank showing his or her present residence, shall, with the increase and proceeds thereof, escheat to the State."

Pursuant to this provision, the Attorney-General of the State is charged with the duty of taking the proper steps to insure the turning over of this money to the State treasury. This means that through carelessness, neglect, death or some other exigency, something like $75,000, deposited more than twenty years ago in the banks of San Francisco, shortly will be paid over by these banks to the State. Each year the amount increases, indicating, if one cares to analyze the matter, increasing thoughtlessness on the part of the people.

PENCHANT FOR WASTING

In these latter days, when thinking men and women throughout the country earnestly are seeking to impress upon the minds of every one—but especially the youth of the land—the value of thrift, the eloquent story told by San Francisco banks is one that should challenge undivided interest. Certainly there is much in the story told by these reports of deposits unclaimed to support the contention that the American people, young and old, display a remarkable penchant for wasting.

Carelessness in handling what one has is on a par with the distinctly American characteristic of acting on the principle that want never can overtake one. If this brand of carelessness ever has been exemplified in San Francisco, it would seem to have been in the apparently utter disregard for literally thousands of accounts, small and large, forgotten in the banks of this city.

HUMAN INTEREST

What a hidden wealth of human interest essentially lies in the emotionless columns of figures comprising the San Francisco bank reports of deposits unclaimed during the last twenty years. Here, if anywhere, comedy must have stalked hand in hand with tragedy. It requires no effort of the imagination to speculate on the close relationship that must have existed between those forgotten deposits and the everyday life of the community as depicted in the newspaper accounts of those days.

Perusal of the reports submitted by the various banks brings to light much of interest. The forgotten accounts range in amounts anywhere from one cent to thousands of dollars. Obviously, before these reports are submitted every effort is made by the banks to locate the depositors. In some cases they are found to have died, leaving no trace of possible heirs, while in still other instances they simply have disappeared.

HEAVY TASK FOR BANKS

The work necessarily devolving upon the banks in caring for these forgotten accounts is tremendous. In times gone by, this work oftentimes was compensated for by the banks having been permitted to retain unclaimed deposits. While any of these banks gladly would have paid deposits to persons able to establish bona fide ownership, the sums that thus came into possession of various banks throughout the country were considerable. It is related that in Cleveland, more than one palatial bank building was erected solely through use of unclaimed deposits.

Not all deposits unclaimed during a period of ten years necessarily remain unclaimed during the ensuing ten years. Bank officials here declare that many deposits are claimed between the ten and twenty-year period. Most such deposits have been forgotten, but occasionally, so bank officials say, men and women purposely have permitted their accounts to remain untouched for long periods of time.

VARIED ACCOUNTS

Analysis of the various reports shows that not all of the unclaimed deposits are personal accounts. Fraternal and political organizations are numbered among the depositors. Numerous accounts are shown in the name of trustees. Families widely-known in California are numbered among those depositors in San Francisco banks who apparently have forgotten the existence of their respective accounts.

In the Fresno branch of the Bank of Italy, for instance, are accounts credited to Mrs. F. Cartwright, George Barclay Hodgkin and George Shirley. In the Los Angeles branch the Non-Partisan City Central Committee, Myer Lissner, secretary, is credited with an account of $37.72. Los Angeles Tent No. 2, Knights of the Maccabees, is credited with a deposit of $796.38. Florence E. Dolph has an account of $1701.93 and Blanche L. Dolph has a credit of $2763.51.

The Wells Fargo Nevada National Bank of San Francisco shows an account of $13.50 credited to the American Bank of Mexico, while the Bar Association of San Francisco has an account of $3.80. The National Biscuit Co. still has a deposit of $1.83 that has not been touched during the last ten years.

BALANCE OF ONE CENT

In the Merchants' National Bank, Gus Bouquest still has an undisturbed balance of one cent that may go to the State unless prompt action be taken. The Swedish Christian Benevolent Society has a deposit of $23.59 that faces the same fate. John J. Ortner, trustee for Fred H. Ortner, has an account of $11.63 in the San Francisco Savings and Loan Society and Alexander McKenzie has $2223.64 in the same institution. In the Union Trust Company of San Francisco, A. L. Anderson has an undisturbed deposit of $2702.63 while Lillie B. Crocker, executrix of the estate of Mina D. Solomon, has $219.43 in this institution.

In the reports thus far received by the State Superintendent of Banks, the smallest unclaimed deposit is one cent, while the largest, $7883.66. For the most part the individual items shown in the various reports are for small amounts, the average being deposits of approximately $1.50.

A 1922 San Francisco Chronicle newspaper article that discuss unclaimed money in San Francisco Banks at that time

To make your quest for unclaimed money easier, I have information about advanced systems of searching for people that only the top private investigators and government security organizations use. You will be amazed at how easy it is to find anyone you want — no matter where this person is.

How to Get Things Rolling

I know it sounds hard to believe and in today's economy it is difficult to fathom that people put billions of dollars in banks and other institutions and then forget that they put it there. But it is true, they do. I know you and I would have a hard time doing that. But our financial condition is most likely different from many of these who do theirs. But again, the truth is that it happens all the time. Your goal as a finder is to contact the owners of this unclaimed money and collect a fee for your services. There are other finders doing just that and are making a hefty profit every year.

I'm going to intervene here and make this statement. It takes work to reap the rewards this opportunity offers. It is not difficult work but it is work. Efforts in the form of research, phone calls, sending letters and follow up are essential.

All fifty United States and its territories have some form of unclaimed property office that has the sole responsibility of collecting and returning unclaimed money back to its rightful owner. In many cases the unclaimed property office is a division of the state's treasury department. Every state has different laws and policies regarding the handling of unclaimed money.

Let's take a look at how the process of how money and other property is left unclaimed. A person, due to neglect, forgetfulness or death will leave behind money in a bank, with a landlord, with a utility company, a retail store, or other institutions that require funds be placed on deposit. These institutions, whether it be a bank, insurance company, business (retirement fund), government office, or even a security company, after the money has gone unclaimed for a specific period of time must report unclaimed money to the state. If the unclaimed money is not claimed by the owner in a specified period of time (the amount of time varies from state to state; in California it is five to seven years, depending on the institution), this money must be turned over to the state treasury department.

Each year millions of dollars are turned over to the State Treasurer's Office by businesses who are unable to contact property owners. These funds may be in the form of cash, stocks, bonds, securities, insurance benefits, etc. This site allows you to search the State Treasurer's Unclaimed Property Database to determine if we may be holding unclaimed assets belonging to you or your family or business.

Unclaimed assets are reported in the name or Social Security number of the owner(s) along with any owner information (if available).

The Treasurer's office will periodically update this database to include new names reported and to remove those which have completed the claim process and have been returned to its rightful owner(s).

THE CALIFORNIA UNCLAIMED PROPERTY PROGRAM

The Unclaimed Property Law is designed to return unclaimed property to owners or to their heirs. These people have either forgotten about the property, or in some instances did not even know of its existence.

The State does not receive any of this "abandoned" property until it has been held by the organizations reporting it for seven years after the last contact with the named owners. The State begins its efforts to contact the owners as soon as the property is reported to us. The State Controller publishes the names of owners in a newspaper in the county of their last known address. In addition, the State Controller also mails a notice to the named owners at their last known address.

Current lists are also distributed to main libraries and interested TV and radio stations. Microfilmed records of all accounts that have not been claimed are maintained in our office and are open for public review on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 8:00 to 4:30 p.m. These microfilmed records have also been made available for purchase, (See Exhibit "3" for cost and ordering instructions.) The success of the unclaimed property program is evident. Last year alone, almost $10 million dollars were restored to owners as a result of program effort.

In addition to unclaimed property, we also receive Estates of Deceased Persons. These come to us under provision of the Probate Code. Microfilmed listings of the estates are also available for review or purchase. (See Exhibit "3" for cost). Unlike abandoned property accounts, which are held in perpetuity, these estates do permanently escheat after a period of time and are no longer available to claim after a specified date.

Estates with named heirs in the amount of $1,000 or greater are subject to judicial escheat. After we have held the money received on these estates for a period of five years, we send a list to the Attorney General's Office. Their office publishes the list, again verifies with us that there has been no activity on the account, and then initiates a court order to affect permanent escheat. Five years from the date of this order we then complete the escheat action. Thus, on these estates the property is subject to claim for 10 years after receipt of funds by our office.

Estates with named heirs under $1,000 and all estates with no named heirs are subject to administrative escheat. The estates under $1,000 with known heirs escheat 10 years after we receive the money - the estates with no known heirs' escheat 5 years after receipt of money.

We publish a legal notice listing the estates under $1,000 with known heirs in the San Francisco, Sacramento and Los Angeles areas. The above escheated actions are reversible if it can be demonstrated that an inquiry or claim was initiated before the escheat date.

Some states have no time restriction for a person to claim his or her money once it is in the hands of the state, but some states do have time restrictions. Wyoming only allows owners five years to claim their money, while states like Indiana allow owners 25 years.

One more thing to remember is that some states pay interest on unclaimed money (not more than 5 percent). However, most states don't pay interest on the unclaimed money that's sitting in their accounts.

Contacting the State Offices

The state offices contain a gold mine of information. They have lists of owners of unclaimed property. Some states will sell you a copy of the list. Most will let you view the records if you go to the department office. But the most convenient way to see the lists may be to go to your local library where the lists may be on file. You may want to call your library to see if you can have access to their lists.

In addition to the unclaimed property, the states also receive estates of deceased persons. Listings of the estates are also available for review or purchase. Unlike abandoned property accounts—which are held in perpetuity—these estates do permanently escheat or revert to the state, after a period of time and are no longer available to claim after a specified date. In legal jargon, if an estate is subject to "escheat," it means that the state has the authority to take the money permanently if the rightful heirs don't claim it within a set number of years.

Contact your state office or any state office of unclaimed property owners from them. The unclaimed property office in your state must let you have access to this list.

Some state offices may not send you the list of names, or they may charge you a large fee. There's a way around this in most states, and that is to go to the unclaimed property office in person. A few states now require appointments, but be persistent and you can see the lists.

Various types of intangible unclaimed property

Persistence in seeing the list and going to the office in person pays. A 14-year-old boy in Connecticut was having trouble getting the list from his state's office, so he went in person. He reviewed the list, jotted down 30 names, and began his search for the rightful owners. After finding the first few names on the list, he told me that he's now $16,212 richer— and he earned his wealth in just a few days.

Here are the names and addresses of the state agencies to contact. If you need the phone number, it can be found in the front of your white pages where there is a listing of state offices, or call information.

Heir Finder's Business Basics

Now is the time to begin earning money by returning lost money to the rightful owners. Here are the simple steps to start the process;

1. Contact your local state office and get a list of unclaimed property owners. The state office will either give you a list of all unclaimed owners or direct you to the local newspaper ad in which they published a list of current unclaimed property owners. Almost every state publishes the accounts in the largest circulation newspapers of every county either once or twice a year. The month they publish this list varies, however, the most popular month for the listings appears to be February. The lists are found in the Legal Notices section of the paper. An example of a newspaper Legal Notice clipping of unclaimed owners has been included at the end of this chapter.
2. You have the list of names from your state office. Now it is time to set up your business. Some record keeping is necessary so you will need some file folders and some place to store them. This is a small expense, about $5.00. This is the best time to establish good work habits. Remember this is a business, so treat it like it is one. Since it is a business another important part is how much will you charge for your finder's fee. Some states have a limit on the amount of finder's fee you can charge. It is important that you also obtain a copy of your state's and the unclaimed property statute for each state you will be offering your services in. The first question most new finders ask is: how much should you charge for your finder's fee? I say that one-third or 33.3 percent of a share of the unclaimed money is fair. There are those who charge up to 65 percent commission to find owners of unclaimed money. I think that is rather high. But the ball is in your court—you can charge whatever you think is fair. But do remember, some states do have limits to the amount of fee you can charge and there are penalties for non compliance. Know the law for the state you are servicing!

After you find the name for a particular individual you contact him or her either by phone or mail. You then explain to this person that they will receive a check for a sum of money if he or she can provide the correct verification and afterwards, signs and notarizes the contract you are sending. Notarization is done by a public notary. After the person signs the contract, you will then send the information to the state and they will tell you what further information they need to process the claim. Easy, isn't it? You'll have money in your pocket in a matter of weeks.

Some states won't release how much the account is for until they know you have found the right person. What you tell the claimant is that you need a copy of their driver's license and/or social security number when they send the contract back to you so that initial verification can be made. Tell them that your source (the state) will release the amount and you will tell them what it is once that verification is made.

Some states won't allow you to share one-third with the property owner you've found. Check with a lawyer if you are unsure of regulations in your state. Included is a sample of a document you can use as a guide for drawing up the contract between you and the unclaimed property owner. Be sure you check with a lawyer first to make sure everything in your document is legal and falls within the state you are servicing statutes—as you know each state is different.

If contacting the potential unclaimed property owner by telephone, here is a sample conversation for you to study. In my experience of contacting unclaimed property owners, they will be skeptical and highly suspicious of you initially. A relaxed professional tone is important. This is how a typical conversation would go:

You: May I speak to Ms. Mary Brown?

Mary: Hello. This is she.

You: Hello, Ms. Brown. This is Harold Macman with Heir Finders here in Seattle.

Mary: What can I do for you?

You:Ms. Brown, Heir Finders assists and unites individuals with lost and unclaimed properties that they may not be aware are due them. We have come across $6,752.31 that is due you and have assisted in obtaining for you.

Mary:Just a minute, I don't have $6,752.31 coming to me.

You: Ms. Brown, haven't you heard of wealthy people leaving money behind to people that didn't even know them or distant relative passing and leaving money and property without a will?

Mary: Yes.

You: Well, Ms. Brown, this money is definitely yours; however, I can't tell you the source of this money at this point until more information is obtained.

Mary: Are you telling me the truth? Is this some type of crank call? I have read stories in the newspaper about call like this. Is this really legitimate?

You: I assure you, Ms. Brown, that everything I am telling you is the complete truth based on the information that has been discovered to this point in time.

Mary: If this is true that would definitely be a Godsend because I could sure use that money. What do I have to do to get it?

You: Ms. Brown, I will be sending you a form in the mail. All you have to do is sign the form and the money is yours.

Mary: That is all I have to do?

You: Yes, Ms. Brown, my record lists your address as 1234 Forbes Lane N.E., Seattle, Washington, 98442. Is this your correct address?

Mary: No that is my old address. My current address is 17851 Hearst Street S.W., Emerson, Washington, 98234.

You: All right, I have updated my record and will send the form to that address. Ms. Brown you'll find everything you need to know about Heir Finder's and what you need to do to get your money in the packet exactly the way I explained it to you. If you have any questions, you're welcome to call me at 800-934-5674, ext. 564.

Mary: Okay.

You: Ms. Brown, it is very important that you send this form back to me as quickly as possible. The sooner you return the form to me, the sooner you will have your money.

Mary: Thank you and I'll be speaking to you soon.

You: You're welcome. Goodbye.

The Contract

Below is a guideline for the contract between you (the Investigator) and the person whose property you've recovered (the Claimant):

Investigator Agreement/Contract

Claimant _____

Address _____

Reported _____

Social Security Number _____ — _____ — _____

Type of Account _____ Amount _____

Stock _____

I

This agreement is entered into by and between _____ hereinafter referred to as

"Claimant", and _____ hereinafter referred to as

"Investigator".

II

The Investigator, through his/her efforts, has located claimant, who will be entitled to the above described assets.

III

Investigator and Claimant do hereby agree that in consideration of Investigator's efforts in locating Claimant and assisting in the actual recovery of the above described assets to which Claimant is entitled, Claimant hereby assigns to the Investigator a set fee of (the finder's fee percentage goes here) for expenses and services rendered, providing Claimant recovers described assets.

IV

Investigator and Claimant agree that in the event Claimant is not entitled to assets described above and such assets are not recovered, there is no obligation on either party to the other.

This agreement is void unless executed by both parties.

Investigator_____

Phone_____Address_____

Date _____ Investigator's Signature

Claimant_____

Phone_____Address_____

Date _____ Claimant's Signature

The Reported Line, in this sample contract, is to be filled in with the year that the bank, insurance company, or other unclaimed property generator reported the money to the state. If the state you are servicing does not release information about the account, then you should leave the type of account and amount section off your form. You can not be expected you to know this information if they haven't been revealed. An individual finding their own unclaimed property account wouldn't know this information if they just saw their name in the paper.

When producing your form make it look professional. Create an informative header that includes company contact information such as, company name and logo, address, telephone number, email address, and web site address if applicable. The packet should also include a cover letter, brochure about your company and a self address return envelope should be included.

If the property value isn't stated, then you will need to specify your finder's fee percentage in Section III of the contract. This is the percentage of the property value that you will be receiving instead of listing the actual amount, since you don't know what it is. You may also need to modify other sections of the contract to specify the lack of unclaimed property value information.

It would be a good idea to review and discuss the contract with an attorney or other legal authority within the state you are servicing. Unclaimed property laws change frequently from state to state, so it is important that you be aware and abide with the state laws that regulate unclaimed property in your state and the state(s) you service. The contract presented herein contains a good guideline for you to follow.

Some states require that finders have special licenses. Know if your state or the state you are servicing requires that you need a private investigator's license. These states did require special licensing at one time, be sure that you confirm the current status of unclaimed property finder's licensing requirements if you will be servicing Florida, New Mexico, Washington, Arizona and New York.

After The Contract Is Returned To You

After you have received the completed contract and other necessary documentation, you are prepared to proceed to the next step. You should contact the state unclaimed property office and send them a copy of your signed contract as well as verification documentation and identification to prove that the person you found is indeed the individual that owns the unclaimed money.

When the state receives your paperwork, they will send you forms to complete. This may sometimes include a claim form for the claimant to complete. If this is one of the state's requirements, you may want to include a copy of the state's unclaimed property application or facsimile in the contact packet you send to the claimant.

After you fill out the forms and return them to the state, they in turn will send a check in the mail. Depending on the state, the check may be sent to you or to the claimant. Other states will send the check to you but in the claimant's name to make sure everybody gets their money. You will have to ask the state office's you service how they disburse their checks.

It is as easy as that.

Tracking down the Address

You have a list of potential unclaimed property owners and have reviewed it. Now you have to locate these potential clients. The list you will receive from the state will give you the full name, address and type of account of people owning unclaimed property. This information will vary from state to state. You will now have to put on your private investigator hat. It's not difficult if you know what to do. In the next few chapters, I will tell you exactly how to find the person or persons you are looking for.

Two excellent references I recommend you obtain that will be very valuable as you track down the address of unclaimed property owners are Find Them Fast, Find Them Now: The Handbook for Finding Missing Persons and You Can Find Anyone: A Complete Guide on How to Locate Missing Persons. No one vanishes without a trace. And because the missing always leaves behind paper and verbal trails, you can find anyone you wish and find them now. These books provide private investigators secrets for finding missing persons.

In most cases, these people are no longer living at the address you will receive. But you never know. Send a letter to the address you have on record and see what happens. If someone is living at that address, contact these people and ask them for the whereabouts of the people you are looking for.

How do you find out who is living at that address? You can find the person through the post office, with telephone directories, city directories, plot maps, or the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) records. Let's start with the post office.

The Post Office

You may be able to get the address you need through your local post office. There is a good chance the person you are looking for is no longer at the current address. This doesn't even present a problem if you handle it correctly. The post office has a helpful service for a small cost. You can ask the postal clerk for the current address of the person you're searching for. Most likely they will not give it to you via a verbal request, however, if you do so utilizing USPS services there is a good chance you will get the information you want, if it is available. One method is to send your letter by registered mail, return receipt requested. This forces the people at the post office to give your request priority. Another method is to send a letter and write 'DO NOT FORWARD' and 'ADDRESS CORRECTION REQUESTED' on the letter. This second method is not as effective as the first method, but it is free.

Getting a street address from a P.O. Box number is much more difficult today than in the past. In some cases you may want to reach someone at his or her home address. You can almost always get someone's address with a subpoena. This isn't difficult. Just pay a visit to the county clerk's office and pick up a subpoena form. Complete the form, filling in all the necessary information. Next, you'll need to go to the post office and explain to the clerk that you need the street address of this individual so that you can serve them a subpoena. This should always prove to get you your street address.

Directories

You will probably be able to find the person you are looking for by simply looking through the phone book. If you can't find the person you are looking for in your current phone book, look in older editions of that phone book. Older editions are available in public libraries or the librarians can tell you where you can find old phone books. Don't overlook calling up people with similar surnames of the person you are looking for. You may be surprised how many relatives this person may have in that town. Call up people with similar surnames and ask them first if the person you are looking for resides there. Then ask them if they know of the person you are looking for.

Do not overlook the phone and search directories available online. Typing an individual's name in an online search box will generate all available address and contact information for all individuals with that name surname.

Old city directories may come in handy, also. They can be of great assistance to you; they can help you find out who is living at a given address. City directory companies like R. L. Polk and Cole Publications canvas neighborhoods and utilize all available resources to find out who lives at each address. You may find that their directories are more complete than the telephone book directories because they even tell you where people with unlisted numbers live. Both of these directories can be found at most public libraries. You may want to look at old city directories. These are available at the Library of Congress, historical societies or some large public libraries. These books are available for purchase online at Amazon.com.

A virtual treasure chest of information on nearly every business and consumer in any given location throughout the U.S... The city directory should be one of your first stops as you seek to track down addresses. Information on over 1,000 cities is available in hard copy print editions and on electronic CD-ROMs.

Cross-street Directory

Another tool along the same lines of city directories is called the by-street or cross-street directory. They are simply reference books similar to the standard telephone directories; however they enable you to locate an address from a telephone number and a telephone number from an address. Large local libraries will have a copy in their reference section.

Real Estate Plot Maps

Real estate companies have to know who owns every piece of land in this country. No matter what address you find, you will be able to look up the owner on a plot map. These maps are available at your local library or from any real estate agent. If you have a hard time getting these lists, they are available at no cost from your county assessor's office.

Look up the address of the unclaimed owner that you received from the state. On the lot maps you will see the name and address of the owner of the property. The person residing on the property may not necessarily be the owner. He could be renting the address from the owner. Contact the owner either by mail or just look up his phone number and call him. Ask the owner if he is aware of the whereabouts of the person for whom you are searching. He may give you a good lead to follow.

With real estate plot maps you have the ability to look up the person by his address or by his name. Look up the person you are searching for in the town where the person last resided. By doing this, you may be able to find a piece of property that the person owns. If you do find that person, contact him by mail or phone.

The Department of Motor Vehicles offices of some states have a free address verification service that you may use. If you contact them and give them the address, name and date of birth of the person you are looking for, they will tell you if they have the same address in their records. This service is mainly used by car rental agencies. If you want to use this service, use the DMV list I have provided for you in the next few chapters.

The County Recorder (County records section) is a wealth of information. The County Recorder maintains records of all Assumed Business (DBA) certificates which list all registered business of that county alphabetically by business name. It will include the business address, owner and owner's address. The same records are maintained on corporations in the county. Also, records are maintained on all real estate transactions including information on deeds and mortgages, powers of attorney, judgments against real property, military service discharges, pistol permits issued, death, birth, marriage and coroner's certificates.

Neighbors, Relatives, and Friends

Very few of you studying this guide will be willing to go to this extent to locate an unclaimed property owner. The following techniques take lots of guts and effort. They require face to face contact and require that you create pretext scenarios to draw information from people. These are professional investigator tactics. They are highly effective. I include them here because they are alternative approaches and will deliver excellent returns.

In the last chapter I explained how to find someone you are looking for at a particular address. If you are having a hard time locating a certain individual, it's time to ask the neighbors. They could tell you more in less time than you could find out yourself.

There are people who do very little else but watch their neighbors. These are the people you will want to contact. They love telling you everything they know if you approach them the right way. Contact them preferably by phone and ask them what they know about the person you are looking for. Let us review the methods in contacting neighbors and relatives.

- 1) Use phone books to look up relatives (people with similar last names).
- 2) Use city and cross-street directories to look up neighbors and ex-neighbors.
- 3) Use real estate plot maps to look up neighbors and landlords of neighbors.

Here is how a typical conversation would be between you and one of the neighbors. Let's say the person you are looking for is Peter Johnson.

You: Hello, Mrs. Stein.

Stein: Yes, speaking.

You: Let me introduce myself. My name is Sam Smith and I'm with the Helpful Finance Company. Peter Johnson used you as one of his references on his loan application with us. Could I ask you a few questions?

Stein: Sure.

You: How long have you known Peter Johnson?

Stein: I've known him ever since he moved into this neighborhood ... must be about six years.

You: Do you know where Mr. Johnson is employed?

Stein: Last I heard he was a high school counselor at HenryStahls.

You: Do you know where Mr. Johnson's current address is right now?

Stein: He used to live across the street. He now lives on Park Place Lane, some where in the 9300 block.

You: Do you happen to have the exact address?

Stein: Hold on. Here it is. It's 9337 Park Place Lane, N.E...

You: One more question, Mrs. Stein. Mr. Johnson has left us 609-274-8365 as his phone number. Do you list the same phone number?

Stein: That's his old phone number; let me give you his new number. It's 609-274-7974.

You: I want to thank you for your help. You have been very helpful. Have a good day, Mrs. Stein.

Do you see how many leads Mrs. Stein has given you to the whereabouts of Peter Johnson? Not only will you know where he lives and works, but you will have his phone number. Using this technique will get you a great deal of information.

You may sense aggressiveness when you talk to some people. They may not have liked their old neighbor and would not want to help their old neighbor pass a credit application.

If this is the case, tell the person the truth. You may be surprised how much people will help you for your sake and not for their neighbor's sake. If you still have a hard time getting any information from the neighbors, try the independent courier delivery man routine.

Go to the neighbor's door in person with a courier message, addressed to the person you are looking for, in your hands. Make sure the message is personally signed. Let us use Peter Johnson for this example. Go to the house where Peter last lived and try to deliver the package.

If that person can't help you, go to all the neighbors and ask Peter. Explain to the people living there it is an urgent delivery and you must find Peter. Ask them for a phone number or address. You will be surprised at how helpful neighbors can be. If the person you are interviewing does not know very much, ask them for the name and address of a relative or a close friend with whom you could leave the package. One word of caution: do this stunt early or late in the day so that the neighbors are home.

You will find that relatives and friends are more loyal than neighbors. It will be harder to get information from them. I have had success with the credit application story in getting information from relatives and friends. But they ask a lot of questions. You also stand the risk of them not trusting you if you lie to them. If you just want an address, appear at their doorstep with a package.

Telling the truth sometimes works if they have a good relationship with the person you are looking for. You will have to use your intuition with friends and relatives for using the best technique. Relatives and good friends are one of the best sources of information you will get, so don't give up on them.

Identity Theft Scare

Identity theft is a national problem and a majorly scary concern for most people. This makes them very suspicious of strangers inquiring about people they know. Be aware of this and be prepared to encounter resistance when utilizing the pretext interview scenario as you search for contact information. People are more familiar with the heir finders today than in the past. Being honest about your intent to unite the individual with found inheritance may put the person you contact in a more helpful frame of mind. No matter what pretext approach you use make sure you look and sound professional.

People seem to trust people who present picture identification and a business card. A picture ID card in a plastic sleeve attached to a lanyard around your neck and a well printed business card will generally suffice to persuade the person you approach that you are on official business. When you initiate the interview, you should hold up the picture ID card so the person can see the picture as you introduce yourself then hand them a business card. Leaving a business card also enables the interviewee to pass on your contact information to the individual you are attempting to locate, if they know that person.

As I stated in the beginning of this chapter these tactics involve field work. You can do it yourself or outsource the service. There are a number of online databases and directory archives that will allow you to do much of the work from your desktop. At some point and time during the process, personal contact is going to be necessary. By telephone for initial contact, to confirm you have made the right contact, or to exchange the check and collect your finder's fee. This is not a totally behind the scenes operation.

Drivers Licenses and Automobile Records

Driver's licenses records are public information for anyone. You can obtain them in practically every state. A few states do not allow public access to this information; they include, but are not limited to Arkansas, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. Be sure to confirm that the state you are servicing has not been added to this banned list.

These records will tell you where a person lives or where he or she was stopped for a moving violation. You can contact any state and find out if that person resides in that state. You may decide to contact the state where the potential unclaimed property owner applied for their Social Security card. These records will locate the individual for you if they have a driver's license in that state. They will also physically identify the person you are looking for.

When you contact the Department of Motor Vehicle, ask for a complete list of activities from your subject's driving record. You will most likely need to know their full name, date of birth and pay the required fee. Changes in information handling services since 9/11 may require you have the individual's permission before the DMV will release this information to you, therefore, it may be less hassle to obtain this information through an online service.

If a person has transferred his license to another state, it will say so within their driver's license record. If you can't find your subject, he may have transferred to Texas. Texas is one of the states that don't notify other states of license transfers.

There are a number of companies that can obtain drivers license information for you online. They have computer access to large national DMV databases. Listed below is information on the largest online DMV search service. You can use them or you can contact the local DMV directly from the list provided for you.

Government-Records.Com and GovtRegistry.Com provide access to publicly available records and resources. Many of their public record searches are geared towards United States public records.

Here is a complete list of state agencies that will give you drivers license information:

License Plates

It is always handy to be able to know who owns which car. In your attempt to locate an owner of unclaimed property you may be able to use license plate information. The Department of Motor Vehicles can supply you several types of information. With a license plate number, they can tell you the owner of that vehicle, their date of birth, address, insurance company, date of expiration for that registration, vehicle year, make, type and color. You may find a car at your subject's address that may be able to give you information. These are, however, circumstances where you would want to speak to an owner of a car. Listed are the state agencies to contact for car ownership information. This information is available in every state. Some states may require that you have permission from the registered vehicle owner before providing you with their information. Some states charge a fee for this service. There are online services that provide DMV search information.

Let the Courts Help You

There is a wealth of information at the local county courthouse. You may be able to find information about the person you are searching for at the county court house. All of the information at the courthouse is supposed to be public information. Ask the clerk at the desk for a file on the person you are looking for. Look through the file and look to see what address was used. In some cases people use different addresses when they are served a citation than the address on their driver's license.

On occasion the court clerk behind the desk may deny you access to the information you want. Unfortunately things have changed and some municipalities have begun to restrict access to court documents that do not pertain to the individual requesting the information. Privacy regulations may apply, therefore, they may actually be able to do this. Some states, like California, have progressive Freedom of Information Act regulation where this information must be made available to the public. Unfortunately, every state has different public information laws.

When encountering a privacy snafu, remember services such as Government-Records.Com and GovtRegistry.Com provide access to publicly available records and resources. It is also possible to access each states court records online. Following is a list of the hyperlinks to the state and county court systems in the United States and some of its territories. You can navigate through the court records online to locate information on the person you are looking for. There will be some type of record if the individual was involved in any type of legal proceeding:

The judiciaries (courts) are probably the single most valuable resource of information available to you. This list is broken down into various jurisdictions. I recommend you utilize each available jurisdiction your potential unclaimed property owner lived in when researching for information about them.

There is always the possibility that the person you are looking for has passed away. In this case you would want to know that this person has indeed died. Obituary records are kept at the county clerk's office. If you use the county clerk's office, you must be sure that the person's last known address was in that county. Records are kept from county to county.

Social Security Records

The Social Security department can reach practically anybody in the United States who has a social security number. These records can tell you anything you want to know about an individual. The only way you can get access to someone's social security records is if you know someone who worked for the Social Security department. The department is always behind on its records about two to four months.

The Social Security department does have one division that will help you out. This division will let you send a letter to any person. They will not give you the address of that person; they will just forward your letter. This can really come in handy so that you could contact a person who owns unclaimed money by mail. Include your phone number and address in your correspondence so that the person can contact you.

When corresponding purely by mail your letter must do all the work for you, therefore, it is important that your correspondence is well written and offer a good call to action. Get the person excited about the money they will receive and be very honest with them. When you write to the Social Security department, try to include as much information as you can about the person you are looking for. The address of the division that will forward your letters is: Social Security Location Service (Baltimore, MD: area code 301)

1-800-772-1213
6401 Security Blvd.
Baltimore, MD 21234

If you have the Social Security number of the person you are looking for, you may be able to use this prefix to locate them. By prefix I mean the first three digits of the Social Security number. This prefix will indicate what state the person obtained their social security card from. This is not necessarily the state in which they were born, however, in the great majority of cases, it is. Sometimes people return to the state of their birth. Knowing the Social Security Number prefix code will allow you to back track to your potential client's home state which is generally a good starting point.

Be advised that the Social Security Administration is the most secretive of all governmental agencies. Even the F.B. I. needs a court order to access their system. Even with an inside source, co-operation will almost be null and the information most likely will not be up-to-date...unless that individual is receiving payments.

Social Security Index of Valid Prefix Numbers

The chart below shows the first 3 digits of the social security numbers assigned throughout the United States and its possessions.

A social security number with any of the following conditions may be an invalid number:

Three or more leading zeros

Ending in 4 zeros

Leading with numbers 73 through 79

Leading number of 6 or 8 and

Leading number of 9 (very few were ever issued)

Military People

If you know that the person you want to reach is in military service — you are in luck. There is a department in the military that will locate a person in the service for you. Just send the person's full name as well as his or her Social Security number to:

United States Army World Wide Locator Service
US Army Personnel Service Support Center
Fort Benjamin Harrison, IN 46249
(317) 542-4211

There is a fee for this service. They will write you a letter informing you where the person you are looking for is stationed.

The military changed many social security numbers of new recruits in the mid 1970's. Should the individual you are searching for be one of these, their number will contain 10 or more digits. This is more than the standard nine digits.

The numbers listed below represent the first two digits of an air force or army service numbers issued between the years of 1940 to 1969. These service numbers were assigned to air force and army enlisted personnel by state entrance stations.

- (1) Regular and reserve air force and army
- (2) Draftees between 1948 and 1969
- (3) State or territory

Other Methods of Locating People

Credit bureaus can help you to locate an individual. If the individual has used credit in any way, shape or form, their financial transactions are located somewhere with in their records. In some cases you may not get an exact address but will be able to find out the general area the person is located. Once you find out their approximate location finding their address is easy.

Credit bureaus are not a great resource of information. Naturally they have access to confidential information; however accessing this information is not very easy. You can purchase their business and pay service for an annual fee and use it to obtain credit reports. It is also possible to obtain an individuals credit report on line. If you have an individual's date of birth and social security number you can request their credit report for a fee. You could ask a friend who owns a business to get the report for you. If they do not have direct access (an account with a credit reporting agency) they usually know someone who does. It's simply a matter of knowing someone.

The contact information for the three major credit reporting agencies (or credit bureaus) is below. When you contact them, you must have specific information handy so that they can verify your identity. Note that these agencies have a duty to make sure that the person requesting a copy of his or her credit report is indeed that person and not a thief or unauthorized third party. Therefore, if the information they have on file about person you are requesting a report for does not match the information provided to them, there will be a delay in obtaining the report, or they might deny your request altogether.

For example, if the individual has recently moved, the credit bureau might not have the new address and phone number yet. If you request they send the credit report to a new address, they will refuse your request and ask you to prove you are who you say you are. This might require sending them copies of your driver's license with the new address and a statement from a landlord, utility company, etc. that proves you live at the new address. Therefore, if you want to obtain a copy of a credit report as quickly as possible, it would be wise to phone them first and find out if you can simply order the report over the phone, or online.

When requesting a credit report, you might be asked to provide the following information: First, middle and last name; current address; previous addresses for the past five years; social security number, date of birth; spouse's name

Credit Card Companies

Credit card companies can be of some assistance to you in locating the person you are looking for. If you know the person you are looking for has a credit card and you know which credit card company and the card number, you have a good chance of obtaining their current address utilizing the pretext technique, discussed earlier in this book.

Here is another example usage of the pretext technique using Peter Johnson. This is how you would discover his current address. Assuming you have his credit card company information and card number. You contact the credit card company billing department:

Operator:Woolworth Credit Billing Department, may I help you?

You:I haven't been received my statement in a couple of months and I know I have a balance. How come you guys aren't sending me a statement?

Operator: Sir, can you tell me your account number and name the name on the account?

You: My name is Peter Johnson and my account number is 98-5408-9879.

Operator: You say you haven't been receiving your statements? Our records indicate they have been sent out and we show none has been returned undeliverable.

You: Yes, can you tell me to what address you have been sending my statements to?

Operator: Mr. Johnson, we have been sending your statements to 65225 Powerhouse Rd., S.E., Three Rivers, WA 94216.

You: That seems to be correct. How much do I owe you?

Operator: You have an outstanding balance of $671.69. Would you like me to send you another statement?

You: Yes, would you. I will check with the local Post Office and ask my family if they have been placing the mail in a new location. Thank you for your help.

The Salvation Army

Transients have been known to carry hundreds of thousands of dollars in their possessions. One transient that was found frozen to death in Montana had about $75,000 in bonds and securities in a plastic bag he carried with him. The person you are looking for might be a transient.

The Salvation Army operates many missions all over this country. If you have reason to believe that the person you are looking for is a transient, you may want to ask the Salvation Army for help. Understand that finding people is really not their specialty.

The service exists for the purpose of trying to restore (or to sustain) family relationships, by locating relatives who for whatever reason have become out of touch. The department is sometimes able to help also in matters to do with identity and relationships.

The Missing Persons Service works in more than 100 countries where The Salvation Army is operating. Searches are carried out by Salvation Army personnel in the countries concerned. It is usual for a standard inquiry form to be completed in the country where the inquirer is living. To contact the department, simply write to your nearest Territorial Headquarters, addressing your letter to "The Family Tracing or Missing Persons Service". Inquiries may take a few minutes - or a few years!

Absolute confidence is observed. The address of a relative who has been found is never disclosed without his or her prior consent. In certain cases, the department is, however, willing to act as a "post office box" until such time as the missing person involved feels free to reveal their address for direct communications. The Salvation Army charges a fee for this service.

The Salvation Army has several different offices. Contact the office that you feel would help you the most.

The Money Could Be Yours

You may own unclaimed money. Did you know that one out of every ten people has some sort of lost money? You may be one of those people or an heir to one of those people. People that die almost always leave some money behind. It's a fact. This lost money is disguised in many different ways. You may possibly be the heir to thousands of dollars of some of this disguised lost money and not even know it. You can discover if you are an heir to unclaimed or lost money and receive your money by following a few simple steps.

Answer the following questions. If any apply to you, are you ready to discover if there is money waiting for you? Every day people are contacted and notified about unclaimed money discovered to belong to them. You may be very surprised to learn the same and at how much money can be yours.

- 1) Have you been married or divorced?
- 2) Changed jobs?
- 3) Changed your name?
- 4) Moved in the past 15 years?
- 5) Retired?
- 6) Had a safe-deposit box?
- 7) Had a death in your family or someone related to you?
- 8) Bought stocks, bonds or any type of a security?
- 9) Worked for a city, state, county or federal government office?
- 10) Worked for the railroad?
- 11) Served with any division of the armed forces?
- 12) Owned and paid on a federally insured home mortgage?
- 13) Owned and paid the premiums on a Mutual insurance company policy?

Getting Your Money

If you have answered yes to any one of these questions, you may have unclaimed money waiting for you. Want to learn how to find out if you have unclaimed monies waiting for you? I will tell you, but first you must understand that it is going to take some effort to locate it. The reason you do not know about it is because it is somewhat hidden. To discover it you must remove some of the barriers between you and it. They are not insurmountable barriers; however they are barriers just the same. Here are the steps you must follow to insure that you will uncover and collect any unclaimed money due you.

1) Make a list of every relative you know that has died. If the relative was distant, you may be an heir but only if that relative had few or no other direct descendants.

2) For each state you may potentially have a claim, locate the address of the Unclaimed Property or Treasury Office or telephonethem. Many of the states have computerized their unclaimed money process; therefore you can obtain this information on line. Try searching Google with the terms “unclaimed property and the state name” you want to check for your unclaimed money. Use the addresses in Chapter 2. Try to provide as much of this information as you can for the state office. Give them your name and address that would be applicable at the time an account in question account was opened. Also include your Social Security number. Give them the (your relative's) account owner's name (maiden name) and address and Social Security number that would be applicable at the time death had occurred. It is wise to include your relationship to the property owner, if that is applicable. Or use this information to initiate you own search. Remember many states have computerized this process which includes access to their database of unclaimed money owners online.

3) Depending on the method of discovery that you use, you own personal database search or allowing the state to do the search for you, when you or the state office finds money, a claim form will need to be fill out. After you complete the forms and provide the necessary verification documentation, the money is yours.

The deceased person may have had an insurance policy that you can't locate. For assistance with this matter you can contact MIB Solutions or the American Council of Life Insurance.

ACLI does not conduct missing policy inquiries. If you suspect a policy exists, but cannot locate it, you may want to conduct your own search using the steps provided below. As an alternative, MIB, an insurance trade association, offers a policy locator service for a fee. For more information about this service, visit MIB's Web site: <http://www.mib.com/html/lost-life-insurance.html>.

Conducting Your Search

- Check your loved one's papers and address and telephone books to look for life insurance policies and the names of insurance agents. Contact every insurance company with which they had a policy, even if you're not sure it is still in force.
- Check with the employee benefits officat their latest and previous places of employment. Or, check with the union welfare office.

- Check bank books and canceled checks for the last few years to see if any checks may have been written to pay life insurance premiums.
- Check the mail for a year after death for premium notices, which usually are sent annually. If a policy has been paid up, there will not be any notice of premium payments due. However, the company may still send an annual notice regarding the status of the policy or it may pay or send notice of a dividend.
- Review your loved one's income tax returns for the past two years. Look for interest income from and interest expenses paid to life insurance companies. Life insurance companies pay interest on accumulations on permanent policies and charge interest on policy loans.
- Check with the state's unclaimed property office to see if any unclaimed money from life insurance policies may have been turned over to the state. If, after a number of years, an insurance company holding the unclaimed money cannot find the rightful owner, it turns the money over to the state.
- Of course, you may wish to contact life insurance companies directly to see if a policy exists. Each state insurance department has a listing of life insurance companies licensed to do business in its state.

Contacting the Company That Services Your Life Insurance Policy

If you are the owner or beneficiary of a life insurance policy written long ago, you may need help locating the life insurer that services and pays claims on the policy.

Over the years, a policy owner may lose touch with the life insurer due to frequent moves, or the company that wrote the policy may have changed its name or merged with another company.

Two sources of information can assist you in finding the life insurance company that currently services your policy:

- The state insurance department of the state in which the insured person resided at the time he or she bought the insurance policy.
- Best's Insurance Reports, available in the reference section of many larger libraries. This annual update lists insurance company names and addresses, as well as insurers' name changes, mergers and other changes.

How to Prevent Your Money from Being Lost

By now, you're probably worried that some time in the future you'll forget about money that's yours or due you. To prevent your assets from being abandoned, lost or escheated, make sure you take the following precautions:

Insurance Policies

- Tell your attorney and your family about all insurance policies you have.
- Tell the beneficiaries of your policy that they are beneficiaries.
- Keep a record of your policies and their policy numbers; store them in a safe place.

Safe-Deposit Boxes

- Tell your family, attorney and accountant where your safe-deposit box is.
- Pay the box rental when due.

Bank accounts

- Keep track of accounts opened by you, a friend or a relative for your child. These accounts are usually opened when a child is born, is christened, graduates, etc., and, after time, are easily lost track of.
- Make sure your savings account doesn't sit without activity for more than a year. Deposit some money, withdraw some money just make sure the account is 'active.' If you have a passbook account, have a bank teller enter your accrued interest.
- For all CDs (certificates of deposit), note their maturity date on your calendar so you don't forget to claim them when due.

Stocks, Bonds, Interest, Dividends

- Keep records of all stocks and bonds that you own.
- Mark on your calendar the maturation dates of all your bonds.
- If you can vote on issues facing stockholders, do so; vote your proxy card.
- If you change brokers, check your holdings for errors.

The least you can do is to inform everyone you do financial business with if you move, change your name or job, your bank, if you retire, or have problems receiving your mail. To prevent loss, don't trust the postal service with your irreplaceable personal financial assets.

More Unclaimed Money and Assets Resources

IMPORTANT: This point can not be over emphasized enough. There is no government wide, centralized information service or database on how unclaimed government assets may be obtained. Each individual federal agency maintains its own records. Each agency provide easy access to information about their procedures and resources.

1. How can I find out if the government has unclaimed money or property that may be mine?

To determine whether any unclaimed funds are being held by the federal government, you must determine the type of benefit or payment that could be involved, the date on which the payment was expected, and how the payment should have been made. Given this information, the agency responsible for certifying any payment due should be able to assist you in determining the current status of any payment involved. The titles and addresses for all federal agencies are available in The United States Government Manual which is available in most public libraries.

Below are government agencies that have databases you can search for unclaimed money.

Pension Funds from Former Employers

National Association of Unclaimed Property Administrators - \(Individual State Unclaimed Asset Web Sites\) - This association consists of state officials charged with the responsibility of reuniting lost owners with their unclaimed property. This site was developed by state unclaimed property experts to assist the public, free of charge, in efforts to search for funds that may belong to you or your relatives.

2. I received a letter stating that the Treasury Department may owe me money or may be holding funds (or property) in my name. The letter indicates that I can receive this unclaimed property if I pay a "finders" fee. Can these companies help me?

Several companies, or locator services, engaged in the business of identifying and recovering unclaimed assets for profit, acquire federal check issuance data from various federal government agencies under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act. The information requested by these companies pertains to specific check symbols, numbers and dollar amounts identified on Treasury check cancellation listings. These listings are not searchable by personal identifiers, such as a person's name or social security number. Personal identifiers may, however, exist in federal agencies' check issuance or cancellation records. Using such personal identifiers, if available, these locator services attempt to locate the prospective beneficiaries, or "payees," for canceled/unpaid government checks and, on their behalf, attempt to collect the payment amounts from the federal agencies that originally certified the payments. It is important to note that these firms are also involved in recovering unclaimed property in the possession of state and local government entities.

3. What happens with federal checks that are returned undeliverable or cannot be paid for one reason or another?

No non-federal agency can issue payments on behalf of federal program agencies until official certification of those payments is received from the agencies. In those cases when undeliverable, nonnegotiable and/or otherwise unpaid checks are returned to the Treasury disbursing centers, the checks are merely cancelled and the respective funds return to the agencies that originally certified the payments.

Glossary of Unclaimed Money Terms

Term Description

Abandonment Period: The period of inactivity (usually 3-5 years) after which property is considered abandoned.

Abandoned Property: Tangible or intangible property that is unclaimed by its rightful owner after a significant period of time. Various states and government agencies have programs to return these funds to the rightful owners.

Account Information: The name and address listed for the owner of the property at their last known address. This information will also include the type of property reported and the value.

Activity: Action taken on property by the owner including making a deposit or a withdrawal, or a memorandum of correspondence by the owner to the holder.

Address of Record: The address reported with the property when remitted to the Unclaimed Property Division. This will not necessarily be your current address.

Affidavit of Heirship: Court documentation identifying the heir(s) to an Estate.

Age Verification: Documentation that establishes age, e.g. state issued identification.

Aggregate Amount: The amount below which holders need not include the name and last known address of the owner with the report. The aggregate amount in Vermont is $25.00.

APV1: Each claim must be reviewed by at least two staff members (four if in excess of $10,000). This status indicates the first level of approval has been applied.

APV2: Each claim must be reviewed by at least two staff members. This status indicates the second level of approval has been applied and if the claim is less than $10,000, a voucher will be issued.

APV3 and APV4: Any claim with a value of $10,000 will receive additional review and be approved after the 4th level of approval has been applied. A voucher will then be issued.

Asset Finders or Asset Locators: Asset finders or locators are individuals or companies that offer to reunite the apparent owner or heirs with unclaimed property, for a fee.

Frequently Asked Questions about Unclaimed Money (Property)

What is unclaimed property?

Unclaimed property (sometimes referred to as abandoned property) refers to accounts in financial institutions and companies that have had no activity generated or contact with the owner for one year or a longer period. Common forms of unclaimed property include savings or checking accounts, stocks, uncashed dividends or payroll checks, refunds, traveler's checks, trust distributions, unredeemed money orders or gift certificates (in some states), insurance payments or refunds and life insurance policies, annuities, certificates of deposit, customer overpayments, utility security deposits, mineral royalty payments, and contents of safe deposit boxes.

What happens to these accounts that have no activity?

Acting in the best interest of consumers, each state has enacted an unclaimed property statute that protects your funds from reverting back to the company if you have lost contact with them. These laws instruct companies to turn forgotten funds over to a state official who will then make a diligent effort to find you or your heirs. Most states hold lost funds until you are found, returning them to you at no cost or for a nominal handling fee upon filing a claim form and verification of your identity. Since it is impossible to store and maintain all of the contents that are turned over from safe deposit boxes, most states hold periodic auctions and hold the funds obtained from the sale of the items for the owner. Some states also sell stocks and bonds and return the proceeds to the owner in the same manner.

How do states try to return this money?

The state treasurers and other officials who administer the unclaimed property programs have developed many powerful and effective methods to locate owners including the use of websites, cross-checking public data, staging thousands of awareness events at state fairs and even shopping malls, and developing a national database. The methods work as tens of millions of potential lost owners inquire annually resulting in this vital consumer protection program returning money to people at a rate approaching two billion dollars annually.

How do I begin my free search?

Companies are required by law to send funds from lost accounts to the state of the owner's last known address. That means you could potentially have unclaimed property in every state that you have resided. You might want to begin your search on your state's unclaimed property online database, or other Web sites endorsed by the National Association of Unclaimed Property Administrators (NAUPA). These sites are free.

If searching is free, why do I receive notices that there is a charge to search?

Several business firms have used the states' freedom of information acts to obtain owner information. These firms notify individuals that they will conduct a search for unclaimed property in their name for a fee. Many states do not even provide complete records to these firms to protect your privacy. The bottom line is that you may pay them to search if you wish, but all the information is accessible free of charge by searching the state databases by contacting any state unclaimed property office.

I have received a notice that property has been found, but there is a fee to obtain it.

There are many businesses, sometimes called finders or locators, which find legitimate lost property for owners and offer to inform them of how to obtain it for a fee, usually a percentage of the total (some states limit the fee to 10 percent). Sometimes, companies will hire these firms to find you before they turn the funds over to the state. Ultimately the finder will ask you to sign a contract. The majority of firms that provide these services work within the law, but there are also many unclaimed property scams across the United States. Before signing any contract from a firm of this type, we recommend that you be cautious and contact the unclaimed property office in your state for more information.

How do I keep my property from becoming lost in the future?

- Remember, property becomes lost due to a company having no communication with the owner. You should contact institutions that hold your money or property every year and especially when there is an address change or change in marital status. For security reasons, most financial institutions do not forward mail.

- Keep accurate financial records and record all insurance policies, bank account numbers with bank names and addresses, types of accounts, stock certificates, and rent and utility deposits.
- Cash all checks for dividends, wages, and insurance settlements without delay.
- Respond to requests for confirmation of account balances and stockholder proxies.
- If you have a safe deposit box, record its number, bank name and address, and give the extra key to a trusted person.
- Finally, prepare and file a will detailing the disposition of your assets.

Does the Federal Government hold unclaimed property?

Yes, but only in federal agencies such as the Internal Revenue Service, HUD mortgage insurance refunds, pensions, and U.S. Savings Bonds to name a few. More information regarding reclaiming lost assets from the federal government and other sources can be obtained by visiting the web site link listed below.

Additionally, millions of Americans are holding more than 35 million U.S. Savings Bonds that have fully matured. Some have lost bonds. Others have forgotten about their bonds. Still others think their bonds continue to earn interest. The value of these bonds is nearly $15 billion and continues to rise.

When savings bonds are sold, the Bureau of the Public Debt collects the name and address of the bond owner. These names and addresses are literally buried within five billion microfilm issuance records. The vast majority of microfilm records are not indexed and practically inaccessible. As a result, nobody is actively searching for the owners of more than 35 million matured unredeemed savings bonds.

If you have bonds that have recently matured or if you have questions about U.S. Savings Bonds, you can learn more at the Bureau of the Public Debt Web site: http://www.treasurydirect.gov/indiv/tools/tools_treasuryhunt.htm
